Lighthouse Spectra is a powerful SaaS solution that streamlines ediscovery workflows in one easy-to-use, scalable, and low-cost experience. This new solution combines the processing power of Nuix, the document review capabilities of Relativity, the imaging finesse of Ipro, and engineering automation of Lighthouse's middleware. The result is a user-friendly solution that provides you with unfettered access to begin processing and analyzing your data, while also maintaining control of when and how others support your project. Lighthouse Spectra is deployed in the Microsoft Azure cloud to provide a scalable, highly available, and secure environment for mission-critical operations. In addition, we supplement this self-service solution with a team of on-demand ediscovery professionals to couple state-of-the-art and industry-proven tools with expert assistance.

Challenges We Address

Although many of today's ediscovery point solutions are powerful, they come with several challenges. There is often a steep learning curve, a lack of workflow definition, and comprehensive management overhead, which take valuable resources and time. Less sophisticated tools provide simpler workflows, but lack scalability, functionality, and flexibility. Too often, multiple tools are required to drive data through an end-to-end ediscovery workflow, but they lack connectivity with other tools and data sources. Thus, ediscovery teams end up exporting and importing data between tools, which introduces the opportunity for error, limits the ability to scale processes across matters, and results in copies of data across dispersed systems. In addition, there are multiple billing triggers and unclear costs, which ultimately makes budgeting unpredictable.
